

Top China Stories from WSJ: Behind the Foxconn Riot, Japanese Brands Tested

New Labor Attitudes Fed Into China Riot: Workers at China's huge Foxconn factory said tensions over strict rules helped spur this week's rioting, in events that raise questions about the sustainability of China's manufacturing machine.

Dispute Tests Japanese Brands: China's tough stance against Japan in a continuing territorial dispute may have no bigger backer than Yao Xin, a 23-year-old legal assistant who says she refuses to buy Japanese products.

Foreigners Move In on Chinese Stocks: Chinese shares fell to their lowest intraday level in nearly four years on Wednesday, and some foreign fund managers say they are ready to pounce.

Japan Car Makers Feel Chinese Chill: Reacting to slowing Chinese sales as a territorial dispute spills over into the economic realm, Toyota will adjust output and Nissan's joint venture in China will suspend car production through Oct. 7.