

International rubber prices stimulate domestic rubber prices rising for three weeks

Reuters – According to the Commerce Department released the latest notice, the domestic rubber prices last week rose 0.8 percent for three consecutive weeks to rise, now risen 3.2%. It is understood that the rubber has been able to end a long period of decline and rising for three weeks, the main international natural rubber prices, driven. In addition, butadiene rubber, styrene-butadiene rubber, nitrile rubber prices over the previous week rose 1.6%, 0.8% and 0.6%.