

Tokyo futures fall from more than 3 pct

TOKYO, Sept 20 (Reuters) - Key TOCOM rubber futures fell more than 3 percent in Tokyo on Thursday as crude oil prices dropped for a fourth day on concerns about the health of the global economy.

The Tokyo Commodity Exchange rubber contract for February delivery was down 8.4 yen or 3.2 percent at 251.6 yen per kg as of 0409 GMT. Earlier the contract fell as low as 251.2 yen.

U.S. crude fell more than $1 to $91.30 a barrel, dropping for a fourth day on worries over the global economy and bulging U.S. oil inventories, while Saudi Arabia reassured consumers it would act to moderate prices. (Reporting by Aaron Sheldrick; Editing by Michael Watson)